Messrs. D. L. Pulliam, A. D. Shotwell, E. T. DuVal, George E. Gary, William H. Owens, and Dr. E. T. Rucker, are busily engaged in perfecting the programme for the great educational rally to be held in Bainbridge Street Baptist Church Friday night. The purpose of the meeting of those interested in the advancement of the educational interest of Manchester, is to form an educational association for the eity. This association, it is proposed, shall consist of every man and woman in the city who has the interests of education at heart and who is willing to devote some time to the educational cause in the state.

There have been organized in Virginia more than one hundred and fifty educational associations within the past twelve months and the parents and educators of Manchester are deeply interested in the meeting to be held here.

The programme will be a delightful one, and one that will be enjoyed by every person present. The children from the public school will take part in the exercises.

Lower Body to Meet.

The City Assembly will meet in regular session Friday night, and there will be many matters of great importance to be attended to. From the committee will come the ordinance looking to the creation of the office of sanitary inspector of the city. The Council will, in all likelihood, come to some agreement on this important matter. While the majority of the members favor the creation of the office and argue that it will be the greatest blessing for the health of the city, there is a difference of opinbe the greatest blessing for the health of the city, there is a difference of opinion as to the duties to be given the new officer. ANNUAL MEETING OF HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Address to Be Delivered To-morrow Night By Professor

Trent.

Trent.

The annual meeting of the Virginia Historical Society will be held The sale, high beginning at 8:15 o'clock in the Young Men's Christian Association Hall. This will be a general meeting of all the members of the society and in addition to the annual address, officers will be elected and President W. Gordon McCabes very interesting report on progress and prospects of the society will be delivered. The public is cordinally invited to attend.

One of the notable features of the meeting will be the lecture by Professor Trent on history as illefature. That, history can be made as faschating as fiction has been shewn by Fronde, Macauley, Green and Fiske. A chief trouble of the later school of historians has been that in their desire for accuracy, they have become in many instances, mere dry-as-dust compliers from documents and their books, are prainteally unreadable and ignored by the people.

Professor Trent will make geplea for history that will, of course, be true as to facts, but which will likewise have charm and silve. He is a native of this city, known and related to many of our people, and is one of the most eminient literary men and critics of America.

NORFOLK, VA., January 2:—Joseph Etheridge, Jr., the fourteen-year-old son of Joseph Etheridge, of Norfolk county, was sent on to the grand jury of the Norfolk County Circuit by Justice
Carmme to-day to answer the charge of assaulting Lilla Miller the eight-yearold daughter of Floyd Miller.

The alleged assault occurred on the afternoon of December 18th, while the mother of the little girl was doing her Christmas shopping. The testimony was revolting, and while the pretty bluecyed victim told an apparently straightforward story, the boy denied the charge in toto.

Two physicians appeared in the case, ne for the prosecution and the other for the defense.

Great Actor's Success As

IT IS ROMANTIC AND SUBLIME

"Don Carlos."

Bijon Makes New Record At Holiday Performance-Howard Kyle Here Friday.

Orleans writes as follows regarding Mr. Richard Mansfield's production of "Don Carlos," which will be played at the Academy on Saturday night, preceded by "Beau Brummel" at the matinee;

"Don Carlos" is a tragedy, which is as boldly romantic as it is grantly sublime. its theme is one upon which an English American dramatist would not venure, but in this it is characteristic of Germany's great dramatist. The love of the hero for his beautiful stepmother might be regarded as a perilous theme for expolation on the English-speaking stage, but it is handled with such lottibuses of tone, purpose and method that no one would think of regarding it as perilone.

one would think of regarding it as perilous.

Don Carlos, who in some respects suggests a modernized Hamlet, is not by any means a wholly lovable character. Profoundly in love, he has little regard to waste upon anything that does not minister in some way to his own aspirations. Smarting under the cruel injustice of a cruel, tyrranical and cowardly father, he suspects every one he meets of being a paid spy, and while in most cares he is right, he makes a melancholy mistake in the case of the Marquis de Posas. His wild passion for his stepmother has made im all but a monomaniac, while his surroundings have forced upon him the necessity of meeting treacher; with cunning. The best side of his nature is shown in his grief and anger at the mirder of his only friend, and far and away the grandest passage in the play is his direce arraignment of his father, the King, as he stands beside the lifeless form of his mutered friend.

"Great Ovation.

Great Ovation. This is an oration that deserves even in the translation, to be ranked as a classic in dramatic literature. In this Mr. Mansfeld was seen at his best. The marvelous and thrilling votal effects produced were in themselves a study to wonder at. With a seeming unconsciousness he sweeps depths, yet never inharmonious nor un-melodious; nor in either the highest or the lowest note do the tones give the slightest suggestion of having approach-ed the limit.

The bitterness of this flerce denunciade the limit.

The bitterness of this fierce denunciation is but half expressed in words; however. The look, the gesture, the horror and rage depleted in a face that suggests the carling of some mortally wounded wild beast, all intensify the expression of the burning torrent of invective which he pours forth.

In his love scenes, Mansfield's Don Carlos is tender, poetic, dignified, and romantic in the most exalted sanse, but withal rather more of the ponderously poetic German, than of the fiery, holicoded Spaniard. This is doubtless due took the Spanish hero as the German had created him, Weird, to the verge of transcendental sm this persecuted, unfillation of a soulless, tyrannical father, makes a lover that is picturesquely romantic and profoundly pathetic, yet not the man to win the heart of the normal woman.
